The Power of Positive Thinking

As described in Creative Thinking Training - Thinking Outside The Box, it is a common and accepted idea that a person tends to become what they think about.

This notion has broad implications because it shows you can change the amount of success you achieve by changing the way you think.

Nowhere is this more meaningful than in the area of positive thinking. Positive thinking is not some new age idea used by trendy, offbeat organizations. On the contrary, it is a most definitive science of thinking that has demonstrated beyond a shadow of a doubt the connection between personal achievements and the power of positive thinking.

Relying on negative feedback to achieve excellence could not be farther from the truth. Evidence shows a 9 to 1 ratio for the difference in achievements in an environment rich in positive thinking compared to negative thinking.

To know this fact is one thing but to change thinking patterns is another and it isn't easy. It requires constant awareness of your negative thoughts to change them to positive affirmations.

This paradigm shift has taken firm roots in the past decade where the positive thinking strategy has become an accepted standard as being directly related to the success or lack of it of an organization.

Is It REALLY Possible To Eat Healthy At A Restaurant?

-By Johnny
Sorensen

If you and your family love to eat at restaurants as I do, you may think that this lifestyle is not good if you're trying to maintain a healthy diet. In many cases, you would be correct. However, you can still enjoy restaurants occasionally while maintaining your healthy diet. It's all about making good food choices, which starts with learning about the nutrition you need to stay happy, physically healthy, and active.

When you pick up the menu, start by skipping over the drink section. Although you may be tempted to enjoy a beer or mixed beverage with your dinner, these usually have many empty calories, which is not good for your body. Plus, alcohol is a depressant, and that can be havoc on your motivation the next day. The exception to this rule when it comes to alcohol is wine, especially red wine, which can be fine if you have a single glass and can actually help prevent heart disease for some patients.

Also skip over the appetizer menu, unless it's to over a side salad. The appetizers at restaurants are usually fried, high-fat foods that are not meant to fill you up and can in fact make you crave even more high fat foods. Examples of these are mozzarella sticks, potato skins, and buffalo wings. Instead, simply focus on your main course or, if you must indulge, share a single serving with the entire table of people. When choosing your main dish, it is of course important that you look at the ingredients carefully. Anything with cream sauces or high-fat meats should be avoided, and pass up the potatoes or onion rings. Instead, move over to side dishes like vegetables or ask for just the main course whenever possible.

Remember too that portion is everything. Try to order off of the lunch menu whenever you can, and ask for a doggie bag right away. Split your meal in half from the start so that you are not tempted to eat the entire thing. You'll find it is quite enough for two or three portions.

At the end of your meal, pass over the desert menu, just like you did with the appetizers. Again, you can share a single desert with the entire table if you feel compelled to order, or split your portion in half. Many fancy desserts are restaurants have more calories than your entire meal, so keep this in mind before you flag down the waitress to put in an order!
